

CASE STUDY

Sunset San Francisco Idea House – One of the World’s 12 Greenest Homes

SITUATION

Robin Wilson, President and General Contractor of Meridian Builder & Developers, a San Francisco-based construction company, contacted Block Consulting to help her plan and launch a direct mail campaign. Robin wanted to generate qualified business leads. After reviewing her work, Patty Block recognized the organization’s extraordinary design-and-build talents.

ACTIVITIES

Instead of settling on direct mail lead generation tactics, Patty proposed a much broader and bolder strategy to strengthen the company’s brand and increase sales – i.e., she pitched Meridian’s talents to Sunset Magazine, an iconic publication about “Living in the West” (circulation >1M).

Every year Sunset constructs one or more Idea Houses to showcase the latest in home design, furnishings, efficient and low-cost materials, and energy and space-saving new home and remodel ideas. After touring the Menlo Park Idea House, Patty asked a Sunset marketing rep for her business card and researched the publication’s decision-makers.

While competing with dozens of multi-billion dollar builders that typically partner with Sunset (Turner, McGraw, Webcor, etc.), our competitive re-branding and positioning activities – including presentation of Robin’s exceptional portfolio to Sunset’s editorial team – resulted in Patty securing a $2 million joint venture for Meridian with the publication.

RESULTS

- Sunset selected Meridian for \$2 million joint venture to build Sunset’s first urban and magazine re-launching San Francisco Idea House – ranked one of the world’s 12 greenest homes
- Secured >$750M in-kind or at cost donations from industry material and service suppliers
- Achieved broad exposure and significant complimentary PR for Meridian:
 - Two Sunset cover stories
 - Thousands of Idea House visitors over 10 weeks of house tours
 - “Living Green!” on Ch. 7 KGO’s View from the Bay
 - Significant online coverage through Green Building and Marketing Best Practices videotaping by AllBusiness.com, now featured on YouTube

The San Francisco Idea House had an amazing impact on the city of San Francisco. Patty approached former Mayor Gavin Newsom’s office and garnered his interest. While touring “La Case Verde,” the home’s 75-foot wind turbine inspired the Mayor to launch a San Francisco Urban Wind Task Force and leverage the city’s natural energy-producing winds. The Mayor announced Urban Wind Task Force results at a City Hall press conference.

In addition to benefiting Meridian, Sunset Magazine, and hundreds of material and service suppliers contracted to help build the house, this game-changing joint venture has had a lasting and positive influence on the city and its inhabitants.

This case study illustrates that innovation and community giving go hand-in-hand. Creative thinking and business collaboration benefit everyone.
